The Quinn Bills

Never before in the history of the country has there been such a concerted attempt to make permanent the type of government under which the people find themselves. This is illustrated by the Quinn bills pending in the Illinois legislature, and which have a good chance to pass. The bills are aimed at the restriction of the primary election rights of the people.

While it is admitted the primary law is not perfect, it stands as a bulwark against caucus control and bossism. One of the provisions of the bills would advance primary dates from April to September, which would give only a few weeks for the campaign. Organized forces could rush thru the campaign without disadvantage, while candidates with less organization and little money would not have time to get their cause before the people.

Representative Arthur J. Quinn, who is sponsoring the bills, and has asked the House to advance them to second reading, has admitted that, if passed, they would:

FIRST—Empower ward and precinct committees in Chicago to handpick the delegates. Downstate this power would be exercised by chairmen of county committees.

SECOND—Deprive the people of Illinois of opportunity to express their choice of candidates for the presidential nomination.

THIRD—Make possible a hand-picked lower house of the general assembly by empowering the ward committee to name the senatorial committee which determine how many candidates of each party shall be nominated in the primaries.

FOURTH—Limit the election campaign to six weeks, instead of seven months, thereby enabling the political organizations to rush through their campaign, and deprive the people of a full opportunity to study and pass upon the records of party candidates.

It is thus proposed to bring the nomination of the president and the selection of legislative candidates back under boss control. If the people want to keep the rights of which these bills deprive them, they should protest to their representatives. It is understood the sponsor, Quinn, is not acting on his own initiative, but under direction of his party organization, which seeks more perfect control of the election machinery.

Police Radio

Police radio, which began in Detroit, Mich., about seven years ago, has now been adopted by 170 cities and towns throughout the nation and by several states. It is one of the most efficient methods of capturing criminals, and the speed with which calls are answered averages 25 minutes. New York claims a response has been obtained in 45 seconds.

When a frightened householder turns in a burglar alarm, he is hardly off the wire before the call is going out to the cars cruising in his neighborhood. Unless the burglar is quick on the getaway, he is handcuffed before he knows what it is all about.

It is now possible for cities the size of Jacksonville to have police radio systems. It has been estimated that a 50-watt station would serve this community. Police patrol cars could thus be reached anywhere, and with a two-way communication system, would be kept in constant touch with the central station.

The greatest disadvantage in police radio lies in the fact that anyone with a low-wave set can listen to calls. Criminals have used sets to keep informed when police get alarms as to their activities. The average citizen is of course innocent in his eavesdropping, but the criminal uses his radio for a practical purpose.

Boat And Batter

Big ships and big baseball players are not necessarily related. But the arrival of the Normandie on her maiden voyage and record run from Europe brought a turn in baseball history in America. It caused the retirement of Babe Ruth from a long and colorful career as the greatest slugger in baseball history.

To be sure, the retirement had been coming for sometime, behind it a variety of reasons, the most potent of which being the Babe's failing health. Then, too, he didn't like the boss of the Boston Braves, Judge Fuchs. Furthermore he had made all the money he needed and was not particularly about any more. He had achieved all the fame he could from baseball. And the Babe was no doubt tired, he had also hurt his knee and wouldn't be able to play for several days.

All of these reasons were brewing together in a pot of discontent, but they needed something to make them boil over. The arrival of the big liner furnished the boiling point. The Babe wanted to see the boat come in. He figured it all out and decided his going to New York wouldn't hurt the team one bit.

But Fuchs knew that the Babe in uniform, whether he played or not, was the best drawing card for the Braves. Already Ruth had helped lift the team out of a financial quagmire, a job for which he claims he was not adequately paid. Fuchs meant that Ruth should be on display, and he told him he couldn't go to New York to see the big boat. Then everything came to a boil and the Babe quit. And that was a big boat coming from across the Atlantic made baseball history for the United States.

Speeding Into War

Announcement in Berlin of new plans for mechanization of the German army is a reminder that the world may never again see immobile warfare of the kind on view in the last war.

The new German army aims at speed. Motor vehicles are being provided in the unheard-of ratio of two cars for every four infantrymen. Artillery is being motorized, the tank corps is being vastly expanded, the underlying principle is that the next war will be an affair of rapid movement, with the side which is able to strike the quickest winning an overwhelming advantage.

All of this is an indication that military science once more is getting back to its time-honored fundamentals—which General Forrest expressed so aptly with his remark about getting there first with the most men.

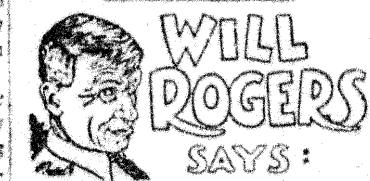

The conditions under which the last war was fought were abnormal. Never again, let us hope, will young men be killed by the millions simply because armies are too swollen and cumbersome to do anything but engage in a slugging match.

Disillusioned Women

The outlaw usually gets most of his publicity before the law catches up with him. Once he is safely locked away in prison he drops out of sight, and that, in some ways, is too bad. If his dreary, monotonous years behind the bars could get the same attention his lawless forays got, he might lose a good deal of his glamour in the eyes of impressionable youth.

This thought pops up when one reads a brief news dispatch telling how former underworld "gun molls" have settled down to the use of mop and broom in the federal detention prison at Milan, Mich. Here are such women as Kathryn Kelly, Evelyn Frechette, Winona Burdette, and others whose association with big shot public enemies made them front page celebrities.

A day-dreaming, empty-headed youngster might have seen something romantic in these women when they were in their hey-day. But to look at them now—clad in drab prison uniforms, mopping floors and working in the fields—ought to be convincing evidence that the glamour of crime is pretty phony.

Behind The Scenes In Washington

Felix Frankfurter's Advice Unheeded, So — NRA Crashed on Schechter Case
Prof. Harvard Law School Prof. Knows U. S. Supreme Court as No One Else Does
... Richberg's Guessing Reputation Badly Dented.

By RODNEY DUTCHER
(Journal-Courier Washington Correspondent)

Washington—Prof. Felix Frankfurter of Harvard Law School knows the U. S. Supreme Court inside out. Few are better qualified to suggest to the administration how liberally it can afford to interpret the opinion which yanked the ice from under the New Deal skating party. There would have been no Schechter decision had Frankfurter's advice been taken.

So no insider was surprised when the professor, on summons, slipped through one of the many shielded entrances into Roosevelt's office at a time when the president was calling for advice.

Frankfurter hadn't been around the White House for a long time. His visits began to drop off about 14 months ago, when the president began deliberately to cater to the big business element, in the hope of obtaining aid for recovery.

A couple of other fellows were barging in and out of the White House at about the same time—General Hugh Johnson and NRA Chairman Donald Richberg.

It was the same Johnson who now gallantly admits large responsibility for policies under which NRA gave the reins to the industries it was "controlling," and let the code authorities run wild—the state of affairs which made the supreme court modest of all.

And it was the same Richberg who had insisted on rushing the chicken case up to the court at a time when the Schechter boys would have been only too happy to compromise, who had offered to stake his legal reputation on a favorable verdict.

An "I-told-you-so" chorus from the Brandeis-Frankfurter proteges in New Deal legal ranks has been ringing sourly in the ears of Mr. Richberg.

Closest to Brandeis

Frankfurter probably is closer to Brandeis than is any other human being. He is the justice's chief interpreter and disciple as well as an outstanding student of the court.

He was intimately associated with the late Justice Holmes, as he is now with some other members of the court. Annually, for many years, he spent from his school prize pupils to become secretaries to Brandeis and Holmes.

Frankfurter knows—as few realize—that justice can be emotional human beings, that they sometimes may act like prima donnas, that they even may become hysterical under pressures and responsibilities as great as the New Deal has thrust upon them.

He knows that the court's intellectual somersaults and back flippings are such that no man can say a decision of today will be that of two years ago or that of two years hence the same as today's.

He knows that the court in the Schechter decision left the administration some real loopholes—and also left itself in a position to insist, if it likes, that those loopholes aren't holes at all.

Knew Defeat Would Come

Frankfurter had known how violently Brandeis felt about such vast delegations of power as were conferred by NRA. He knew what a horrible thing the lumber code, involved in the Belcher case, would seem to Brandeis and some of his liberal associates on the bench.

So he became partially responsible for the administration's withdrawal from the Belcher case as its NRA test. He and his followers here then insisted that the Schechter case, with its far-fetched relation to interstate commerce, gave the court an opening of barn-door size through which to walk over the New Deal's prostrate form.

Frankfurter felt there was no need of a test case decision, on which all might be lost, prior to expiration of NRA on June 18. With no further guidance than that laid down by the supreme court in the oil code case, he and his clan would have had NRA rewritten in an effort to meet the court's obvious views as to delegation of power and gone on under the new act for a while.

Clamor Forces Hand

But there was widespread demand for a supreme court decision before Congress extended NRA. Richberg and the NRA lawyers, sharing with Johnson—and apparently with Roosevelt—the idea that the court would molest their holy bird, insisted on showing the Schechter case right into the debate.

Although Mr. Richberg is a most unhappy man and there are many who think Dr. Frankfurter shows up brilliantly in the light of events, the Richberg adherents are muttering in reply that if Dr. Frankfurter's advice hadn't been accepted NRA would have been tested long ago and time obtained to work out a new law carefully.

Honorary Degrees Are Conferred at College Commencement Here

That the educated woman of today will not and should not turn her back on the traditional duties of women, but that she will and should interest herself actively in "the task of making the world more nearly as God would have it" was the message of Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior and long a leader among Illinois women, to the graduating class at MacMurray Commencement Monday morning.

Monday's convocation was significant not only for Mrs. Ickes' address but because honorary degrees were conferred upon Mrs. Ickes, Miss Nellie Knopf of the Art department, Miss Mary Anderson of the Mathematics department, and Mrs. Eleanor Boston Putnam '95, wife of President J. W. Putnam of Butler University, Indianapolis.

The ceremonies began at half past nine with the playing of a processional Coronation March from "Le Prophete" by an orchestra under the direction of A. Lee Freeman. After the invocation by the Rev. J. M. Warner, of Alton, the father of Eleanor Warner, a member of the graduating class, the class sang its hymn, "Dare to Be Brave." The college choir then rendered "Dear Land of Home" from "Finlandia," by Sibelius, and Babylon, by Clokey.

Mrs. Ickes was then introduced, and spoke as follows:

The Challenging Future
You are graduating today from an illustrious college and I have been asked to bring you a message—a message which should be one of congratulation on the achievements which have brought you to this day and of speculation about the future that lies before the college graduate—the challenging future. This is indeed a privilege.

We have come to take a college education for women very much for granted and have forgotten the struggle necessary before the doors of higher learning opened to us. It is not so very long ago that it was considered not only unnecessary but actually undesirable for women to waste their time over books, at least farther than the three R's. The three C's—children, cooking and the church—did not, in the minds of those of other days, require any learning at all.

President Polk's wife said firmly, "I never discuss a subject on which my sex is supposed to be ignorant," and was consequently silent much of the time.

My mother, a woman of intellectual sagacity, felt, when a girl, a sense of guilt when she took time to read. Subconsciously, she knew she should be sewing. When I was a girl it was not altogether admitted that a college education was the thing for women. When I entered the University of Chicago, a friend of my mother said to her sadly: "If you had only done so and so, perhaps your daughter would not have gone to college." We have traveled a long way since then. The granddaughter of that very woman become a brilliant teacher at Vassar. Perhaps the education then offered was not so very necessary for women, or for their brothers either for that matter, but education itself was expanding and developing, until now, instead of one course of stereotyped subjects, the curriculum offers so many attractive courses that we all want to go back to college and adventure in fields undreamed of in our day.

The New Aim of College
I think the great difference between the education formerly available to youth and that of today is that it used to be considered the aim of college to teach young men and women to fit into the world as they found it; now it is to teach them how to make the world more as we would have it. Not passive acceptance, but thoughtful reshaping and a sense of responsibility for the result. The family is our family; the Government, our Government; the world, our world; and toward all of these we have a duty and a responsibility.

Now in the college classroom and the law library and the science laboratory women are taken for granted. Their curriculum is as sturdy as their brothers' and I have heard it hinted that compared with those same brothers they are not so much on the lookout for easy courses.

Yet with all this increased opportunity in college, we no longer look upon education as complete when we earn our diplomas. Education used to be very definitely measured. We were educated or we were not educated. We were educated when once college was behind us. Now college is recognized as putting into our hands many tools and as teaching us how to use those tools, and, above all, as raising a curtain which gives us to vast vistas. So you are faced with rich choices as these academic doors close behind you. And choice must be predicated on variety. To choose means, as it did with Socrates and with Horace Mann and such others, intellectual inquiry. It cannot, therefore, be dangerous to study systems that are antagonistic to our own, always remembering that studying is not necessarily accepting. It is to these choices and those vistas that I want to direct your attention.

New Fields for Women
For a moment let us leave the greatest of women's careers—home-making—to speak of other fields more newly opened to them.

In the pioneering time of woman's achievement, women were likely to exalt any woman who was the first one to do this or that. This was quite understandable and I think fundamentally legitimate, for in those days of intellectual adventure it took a rather superlative talent—feminine gender—to compete with even a mediocre talent—masculine gender. And so, to be the first woman doctor, or the first woman lawyer, the first woman florist, or steamboat captain or clergyman, was a real triumph. A triumph not only in chronology but in courage. All honor and glory to these trail blazers. But if we had kept up this acclaim for the second or the seventh, or the two hundred and twelfth woman dentist or drug-sist, we would have stripped it of its complimentary attitude—would we not?

As the field of endeavor grew larger the grandstand became more discriminating, not on the basis of sex, but on the basis of ability. Gradually, then, the woman doctor came to be regarded, not as a woman doctor, but as a doctor; the woman writer as a writer; the woman voter as a citizen. There are still many gaps in the chain, many exceptions to the rule, but the general principle is enlarging. If we want to indulge in metaphor we might say that at first the pioneer woman was shrouded with the brick-bats of prejudice. That was bad. Then she was heaped with the flowers of praise. That was not altogether good. Today, in the main, her ability is judged by a yardstick that is sexless. The time must come when we will not rally to a woman simply because she is a woman. On the other hand, it must come to pass that we will not refuse to recognize her ability simply because she is a woman.

The Special Spheres
To women have always been entrusted the guardianship of special provinces. In the temptation to follow a career, let us never forget our stewardship. There are spheres which have traditionally belonged to women. Spheres not to be neglected or despised. From the days of the cave man there have been, as persistent responsibilities for women, home, food, shelter and clothing. What did these mean in the past?

In primitive times, the woman's concern with food encompassed the whole process from the growing of the preparation to the cooking. With shelter it was much the same. Man helped to erect the shelter, but it was woman who cared for it. As to clothing, the entire process from spinning the cloth to making the garment over for the final fourth time for the smallest tot in the family fell to her lot. But today the spokes radiating from the heart and hearth of a woman have been lengthened. Food interest today means a concern about pure food laws whereby the children of all the people may receive the protection hitherto restricted to the individual home. Shelter means not only our comfortable dwelling, but a vigilant interest in proper housing for everybody. It means slum clearance. It means more than an academic interest in the "third-floor back."

And clothing—no longer does a woman care to boast of the baby dress, hand embroidered, that she picked up for 84 cents, for she knows that other women know that you cannot buy hand-made tucks for 84 cents unless you are willing to pay for them also with the sweat and blood of some weary woman bending for hours over these tiny tucks at inadequate wages. It is no longer smart to pick up a frock "for a song" when that song was sung in a sweat shop.

So there are some functions of Government in which a woman easily and naturally takes an interest and for which she has specialized talents. And I am glad to see women, both as voters and office holders, showing concern about legislation affecting women and children and their age-old responsibilities of shelter, food and clothing.

We must not be ashamed of the women's point of view—whether it be in the private life of their homes or the public life of their country. At the conclusion of Mrs. Ickes' address President McClelland read his annual report, more than commonly significant because this commencement marks the end of ten years of his services as president, and in it he attempted to assess the progress made in those years.

The graduating class and those upon whom honorary degrees were to be granted were then presented, and the following degrees conferred:

Miss Fannie Devore Summoned by Death

Although an Invalid She Had Active Interest in Community Life

Miss Fannie Devore passed away at Passavant Hospital Sunday morning at 6:45 o'clock after an extended illness.

She was born 6 miles southeast of Jacksonville, Dec. 23, 1877, the fifth child of William and Emma Devore. She became a resident of Jacksonville about 30 years ago.

Miss Devore, who has been afflicted since early childhood because of an accident, was an example of fortitude and cheerfulness at all times. Due to her affliction she was not able to attend school regularly, but by studying at home she achieved the equivalent of a high school education and had an unusual memory.

She was an artist and studied art at the Illinois Conservatory in 1906-07. She was a faithful member of the First Baptist church of this city and attended services as regularly as her health would permit. She was also a member of the Rebekah lodge. Her many friends will regret to learn of her passing.

She is survived by two brothers, Harvey L. Devore of Murrayville, Ill., and Edward E. Devore of Peoria, Ill., also one sister, Mrs. C. W. Mason of Jacksonville. Several nieces and nephews and other relatives of this community, one niece in Chicago, one in Peoria and a nephew in Rock Island, Ill. She was preceded in death by her parents, three brothers and three sisters.

The remains were removed to the Gillham Funeral Home, where services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Interment will be in Asbury Cemetery.

SON, GO DANCE WITH MILDRED. SHE'S BEEN ALONE ALL EVENING.

MILDRED'S PRETTY BUT, MOTHER, CAN'T YOU GIVE HER A TIP ABOUT "B.C." AND USING LIFEBOUY?

HEAVENS, SHE WAS RIGHT BEHIND US! SHE MUST HAVE HEARD GOSH, I WONDER WHAT SHE'LL DO.

I WAS LUCKY TO OVERHEAR THEM. LIFEBOUY IS GRAND. NO ONE CAN SAY I OFFEND NOW!

B.O. GONE—good times for Mildred!

MILDRED IS THE HIT OF THE EVENING. THAT'S AN OLD STORY NOW. THE MEN ARE SIX DEEP AROUND HER AT EVERY DANCE!

CROSS MY HEART, GIRLS, THE ONLY COMPLEXION SECRET I HAVE IS LIFEBOUY.

You'll be excited for your smooth, clear skin when you use Lifebouy. For Lifebouy lather penetrates deep into pores, gently urges out clogged wastes. Scientific skin tests show it is more than 20 per cent milder than many so-called "beauty soaps."

Barth with Lifebouy leaves one not only grandly, gloriously fresh and clean—but soft, too! For Lifebouy purifies, deodorizes—stops "B.O." (body odor). Its own clean scent vanishes as you rinse. Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau.

ATHLETES SAY:
"THEY DON'T GET YOUR WIND!"

PETE DESJARDINS, winner of many U. S. and Olympic diving titles, says: "I prefer Camels—they never get my wind or jangle my nerves."

When athletes agree upon one cigarette, its mildness is placed beyond question. For they must be sure about mildness! Pete Desjardins says: "Camels are so mild that I can smoke as many as I like and still keep my wind in perfect condition."

Pepper Martin, fleet-footed St. Louis Cardinal, says: "Camels are mild—don't cut down on my speed or wind."

And Pepper is backed by Leo Sexton, Olympic short-put record holder; Craig Wood, the golf star; Reggie McNamara, the "bike" racer; and Susan Vilas, of swimming fame—all outstanding athletes who say they smoke Camels all they please, without disturbing their wind or nerves.

More enjoyment for you in this mild cigarette! You'll find you can smoke Camels all you want! And athletes say that Camel's costlier tobaccos don't tire their taste—don't upset their nerves or get their "wind."

YOU'LL LIKE THEIR MILDNESS TOO!

IT'S JUST AS IMPORTANT TO YOU to keep "in condition" as it is to any champion. Smoke Camels all you wish. Athletes say Camels never upset the nerves, never get the wind.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS!

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

Babe Ruth Breaks With Boston Team; Baseball Future In Doubt

Cubs Defeat Cardinals 6-2 And Halt World's Champions Seven Game Winning Streak

Chicago, June 3.—(P)—The St. Louis Cardinals upward surge in the National League ended today when they dropped a 6 to 2 decision to the Chicago Cubs for their first defeat in seven games.

The defeat set the champions four games back of the pace setting New York Yankees who were idle.

Behind the effective pitching of Charles Root, the Cubs managed to keep out of the second division. A defeat would have dropped them to fifth place, back of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Although he allowed nine hits, Root was effective in the pinches and in addition figured strongly in the Cubs' 12-hit attack off Ed Heusser. Bill Hallahan and Ray Harrell. The Chicago veteran drove out a single and a homer. He turned back the Cards scoreless in the second after they had filled the bases with none out on singles by Joe Medwick and Virgil Davis and a pass, fanning two of the next three batters to face him. In the sixth he also kept the cham-

Indians Score Seven Runs In Fourteenth Inning and Cop Game From Browns 11-4

Cleveland, June 3.—(P)—A wild fourteenth inning scoring spree, climaxing a close see-saw battle, today gave the Cleveland Indians seven runs and a 11 to 4 victory over the downtrodden Browns.

The visitors laid down a hit barrage in the fourteenth that swept Jack Knott, fourth Brownie pitcher, off the mound, and then continued the attack against Bob Weiland. Bruce Campbell's home run off Weiland with the bases filled completed the rout of the Browns.

Play was close until the fourteenth inning "Shades of Night" act. In the eleventh, with the score tied 3 all, the visitors went ahead when Pytlak's single scored Hale. The Browns again tied the count immediately when Ray Pepper doubled Solters home.

Yankees Defeat Athletics 7 To 4

New York, June 3.—(P)—Punching out hits when they meant runs, the New York Yankees turned in their third straight victory today as they defeated the Philadelphia Athletics, 7 to 4, to increase their lead in the American League to two and one-half games over the idle Athletics.

In the fourth game winning spirit of the Mackmen, the Yanks found themselves out-hit, 11 to 9, but they bunched their blows off George Blaeholder, George Caster and Roy Mahaffey. They counted twice in the first inning when Tony Lazzeri tripled with two mates on base, and added another in the second as Frank Crosetti pounded out a double. Bill Dickey's ninth homer accounted for two more of the Yanks' three-run rally in the sixth while Ben Chapman's triple sent Earl Combs home with the final counter in the seventh.

Jimmy Deshong, youthful right-hander, made his first start of the year and managed to hold the A's in check until the ninth despite home runs by Eric McNair and Wally Moses.

The Yanks sent Blaeholder down to his fourth successive defeat since he came to Philadelphia from the St. Louis Browns. Dickey's home run was the blow that chased the veteran from the mound.

Minnesota Wins Big Ten Title

Madison, Wis., June 3.—(P)—Minnesota clinched the Western Conference baseball championship today by pounding out a 7 to 2 decision over Wisconsin in the first tilt of the two-game series here.

The victory ruined the hopes of Illinois, Chicago and Ohio State for a share in the title. They finished in a tie for second place.

Tommy Gallavan, Gopher ace right-hander, was touched for 10 hits but kept out of danger in all except the seventh inning when the Badgers converted two runs on a single and a pair of walks.

The Gophers scored their first run in the fourth when Mark Klonowski hit a homer. In the fifth they picked Don Pearson, Badger hurler, for four hits and as many runs. Stan Koska brought in two with a double to center and Milt Bruhn the other two with a single to center.

There Appears to be no Place In Major Leagues For Game's Greatest Slugger

By Alan Gould
Associated Press Sports Editor
New York, June 3.—(P)—Babe Ruth, breaking off his comeback with the Boston Braves amid an outburst of bitterness after only three months of his three-year contract had elapsed, returned to New York tonight with his major league baseball future in doubt, if not entirely behind him.

There's no place in the big leagues for the big fellow to go. Not a club in the National or American league, polled today by the Associated Press, manifested anything but an academic interest in what Ruth does next. And the ill-feeling apparently generated by his Boston venture will likely score off any major league manager who still entertains a notion to capitalize on the Babe's box-office value.

Just what Ruth will do or which way he will turn remains in doubt. The former home run King hasn't made any definite plans. He's glad to be out of Boston and he would like to remain in baseball.

He will consult his business advisers before making any move to seek further connections, in or out of baseball. He may (1) consider prospective offers from radio, stage and screen; (2) attempt a barn-storming tour with his own team or (3) revive his idea of organizing, under commercial auspices, a nation-wide chain of boys' baseball clubs.

Ruth's break with the Boston club president, Emil Fuchs, was anticipated but followed as it was today, by manager Bill McKee's criticism of the Babe's influence on team discipline, the whole affair marks a sour ending to an arrangement that blossomed so brightly and hopefully this spring.

The Babe was to revive the Braves' spirits as well as their finances. He was to collect upward of $50,000 for his combined duties as player, vice-president and assistant manager this year.

After a record-breaking swing around the "grapefruit circuit," Ruth staged a dramatic entrance by slugging the Giants into defeat singlehanded on the opening day at Boston. The sweet music of that occasion has now turned to discord and the Babe steps toward his career, to show for his painfully brief National league campaign.

Ruth's friends insisted he made a mistake when he attempted to return to daily competition this year. At the close of the 1934 season, his last with the Yankees, it was evident to them that the big fellow no longer could keep up the pace. His legs were "gone" comparatively speaking, and even his batting eyes lost their old snap.

The Babe realized all this, but after a successful winter tour in

Dr. C. P. McClelland Delivers Sermon to MacMurray Seniors

Baccalaureate Address is Centered About Text
Concerning Peace

President C. P. McClelland of MacMurray College delivered the Baccalaureate sermon on Sunday morning to the senior class of MacMurray College, before a large audience at Grace M. E. church. Miss Miriam O. Havighurst of the graduating class, played the prelude. The sermon was delivered by Dr. McClelland, President Emeritus Joseph R. Barker, Rev. E. R. Fulkerson, Rev. McKendree M. Blair and Rev. F. A. Havighurst entered the auditorium. Dr. Havighurst offered the morning prayer and Rev. E. R. Fulkerson led in the responsive reading—Psalm, Thirty-third, Sunday morning. During the service the college choir impressively rendered, "The Lord is My Shepherd"—Schubert, also leading in the service of music. A solo number was beautifully given by Miss Freda M. Gurley of the graduating class with violin obligato by Miss Althea Bush.

President McClelland taking his theme from the 14th chapter of St. John, 27th verse: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

"President McClelland said in part: 'Members of the graduating class, you live in a world full of color and excitement, especially the past few days. Now you are asked to pause, to consider the spirit, the super-natural. Does this seem an intrusion? I know that for the college student the religious nature and spiritual element may seem to be pushed out of your development.'

"Lorato W. Taft once said: 'There should be a secret room for every man. The really poor are those who have no secret room, where beauty comes.' A secret room where God comes, that is where religion begins. The source of vital living. There should be an inner life as well as an outer life. It is difficult to see which is the more important. Washington, D. C. is a small area, yet the seat of the federal government functions there."

Jesus a Realist
"Many men are seeking harmony in human relations," said Dr. McClelland. "I was greatly interested in a visit to New Harmony, Indiana where Robert Owen, the English social reformer, under his own direction commenced an attempt to establish a community at New Harmony, Indiana. His attempt to solve a new social era of common interest failed. Karl Marx was also undermining our present economic order. These and other Utopians were striving to establish harmony. Jesus actually achieved it. Jesus is not merely a dream, as a matter of fact He is a realist. Jesus saw the whole of life clearly. He saw evil and the facts of human life, also saw the inner life. Paul taught love, faith, long suffering, charity and peace."
"Jesus gave an abundance of life in God. The first step toward the inner harmony is faith in God. To exalt God, to make Him supreme. Devote your life to the doing of his will."

To those who accept Jesus comes a sense of exaltation, peace, joy, deliverance. These are in reality the characteristics of the New Testament. The Gospels begin with exaltation and end with exaltation. God has come to men in Christ. Through Him

Jeremiah Theme of Sermon Sunday At Union Service

Dr. Oxtoby Speaks to Large
Audience at First Lawn
Meeting of Season

A large congregation ushered in the series of union open-air services Sunday night, which are to be held throughout the summer on Grace church lawn. Dr. Freeman Havighurst presided and introduced Rev. F. D. Stone who led in prayer. Rev. W. C. Meeker who read the Scripture, Dr. M. L. Pontius who presided over the offering, and Mrs. Helen Brown Read who rendered the solo "In the Night Shall the Song Be to Him" by Dudley Buck. Miss Mahala McGee was at the piano.

Dr. F. B. Oxtoby, representing Illinois College delivered the sermon on "The Man Jeremiah," using as the text Jeremiah 31:32. "I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people." Dr. Oxtoby said in part:

"We are surprised sometimes to see how much new there is in the old. Many present day speeches could well be labeled 'Thoughts from Plato and Aristotle.' Religious and moral genius has existed through all the centuries. I will mention five of them from the Old Testament as well as the Christ in the New Testament. There was Amos, Micah, Hosea, Isaiah and Jeremiah. Outstanding among them is Jeremiah. His parish was Jerusalem and the southern kingdom."

"After he had preached in Jerusalem, and had called down upon him the wrath of the people for his rebuke of their sins, he asked himself, 'Shall I quit?' They called him bad names. They hissed at him as they hissed at Lloyd Garrison the abolitionist, and at the pacifists today. He was a pro-Babylonian. He declared that Babylon would capture Jerusalem and that they should prepare to make the best of it. It occurred in 586 B. C. They would prefer that he rebuke Damascus instead of Jerusalem; just as we prefer that someone rebuke Wall street instead of Jacksonville."

"But Jeremiah could not stop preaching. The fire of God burned within his heart, and he had to speak, even though they persecuted him. Many people who threw rocks, so to speak, at Jane Addams, because of her opposition to war, will no doubt some day place a wreath on her grave."

"The evil king Jehoiakim antagonized the great prophet. When his written prophecies were read to him, he cut them up one roll at a time, and cast them into the fire to be burned. He thought thus to terminate the prophet's influence. But Jeremiah won out in the end as we know today. Tradition says that he was martyred in Egypt."

"His teachings can be profitably tied up with Jesus words in the New Testament. First, the law was to be written in the hearts of God's people. Motives were to be taken into consideration. Murder is judged by previous anger or hatred. The kidnaper or burglar has murder in his heart; for he will kill if necessary. We must be pure in heart as well as in act. In this Jeremiah and Jesus were the same."

"In the second place one must truly know and love God. He who professes to know and love God, but hates other human beings, is in reality an atheist. Josiah the good king proved his religion by championing the cause of the poor and oppressed. Jesus states that true religion is doing the will of his Father in heaven. Church denominations are organizations and ways of worship. They are good and necessary; but do not constitute all of religion. All who do the will of God are religious. We can discover the will of God by reading the sermon on the mount and other of Jesus teachings."

"Jesus emphasizes the value of a human life. Profit and wealth are secondary; human life is primary. This is why child labor laws should be encouraged. Jesus teaches us to be neighborly, and illustrated it with the parable of the good Samaritan. We must recognize all men as brothers, and God as our common Father."

Next Sunday night Rev. F. D. Stone, pastor of the First Baptist church will be the preacher, and Rev. E. A. Hedges will preside.

ROUTT COLLEGE CLASS HEARS BISHOP GRIFFIN

Thirtieth Annual Commencement Exercises Held Monday Night

A large audience which filled the auditorium of Routt College Monday evening for the thirtieth annual commencement exercises. The senior class of 28 members entered in an impressive procession which was followed by a beautiful Glee Club number. "Dear Land of Home—Siberius."

Miss Emma Bergschneider, in her valedictory remarks, expressed the gratitude of each member of the class to the church faculty and parents for the guidance and sacrifice which always set for them the highest ideals.

Miss Bergschneider particularly emphasized the necessity of catholic action in the crisis of the modern world. She said: "There have been few periods where catholic action was more needed. What is the meaning of Catholic action? To put into action the belief of the church, the ideals in to every part of life, the economic, social and political. Catholic action means living up to our belief."

If it is worth the living it must come from Christian love. Would we have had this economic depression and unrest if all Christians had lived up to their ideals?

"As a class we should advance the ideals of the church and carry out social justice, taking our part in social, civic and religious life of the community and nation."

Following two numbers by the Glee Club—"Elegy of the Sea" and the Baroque Trail," the diplomas were awarded by the Most Reverend James A. Griffin, D. D., in a ceremony of great dignity as the members presented themselves before him.

Rev. Griffin, of Springfield, Ill., delivered the address of the evening giving a message of inspiration to all present.

Bishop Griffin in commending the class for its splendid record said: "There is great opportunity for those who have received training in cultural things founded upon religion. Calvin Coolidge said not more law and government but more religion, not more intellectual development but more culture, not more of the outer life but more of the inner life. The United States needs character. The economic depression in the United States is nothing compared to the depression in character. The United States leads the world in crime and in the nations of the world is observed a hectic age."

"The Church is a wise mother, she has seen depression but through the ages has been true to her ideals. So in education, building on ideals and not on fads of the day, will bring lasting results."

"Columbia University features in its courses close dancing and refrigeration. The church emphasizes the principals of education, which should be enduring. The monks and clergy developed the civilization of the world and the church has reason to be proud and rejoice in success of education. The educational system of the church lasts since it is fostering only those things which are lasting and turns from the elements which are only of momentary interest."

"Some members of the class will never see each other again and it is important to build upon the spiritual life that the precepts learned in the classes may be perpetuated in fine characters. A feeling of security should be assured each one, not by money but by character, the aim should be not to make a living but how to make a life."

Bishop Griffin urged the students to obtain this higher culture as part of their education and in his closing remarks admonished them to appreciate the sacrifice of the church, faculty and parents to give them this opportunity.

The Recessional, which followed a number by the Glee Club, "You Can If You Think You Can," closed the very interesting exercises.

The senior class roll includes: William Bell, Emma Bergschneider, Jerome Corbett, Thomas Crabtree, Sally Crowe, Paul Flynn, Mary Helfferman, Robert Henry, Irene Hicks, Margaret Jordan, Helen Kindred, Edward Lacy, Vincent Loneragan, Mary Louise Maloney, Joseph Mandeville, Louis Mattingly, Mary Alice Memm, Merton Miller, Edward Murphy, Donat McNamara, James McSherry, Robert O'Meara, Joseph Pedrick, Jesse Profit, Rose Mary Ridder, Joseph Tapscott, Herbert Todd, Mario Torricelli.

Dr. Drake's remains were brought from Springfield yesterday afternoon and laid in state in the state hospital gymnasium between the hours of three and seven o'clock, with the members of the local post of the American Legion forming an honor guard.

Dr. Drake passed away at 3:20 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Palmer Sanatorium in Springfield. His death being attributed to heart disease. Dr. Drake was 66 years of age.

Dr. Drake, a former director of the Illinois State Department of Public Health, went to San Antonio, Texas, during the winter for his physical condition. He improved slightly, and last month he and Mrs. Drake returned to Jacksonville. On Wednesday of last week he entered the convalescent section of the Palmer Sanatorium in Springfield.

His condition was not known to be immediately critical, his death coming as a great shock to officials of the state service and his legion of friends in Jacksonville. For years Dr. Drake was widely known for his humanitarian work.

Strain, Olaf Peterson and Dr. Marion Sumner. The body was viewed by the patients between the hours of 3 to 5 p. m. and after that time many of Dr. Drake's friends were admitted to the gymnasium.

Coming to the Jacksonville State Hospital in 1928 after long and successful service in public health work, Dr. Drake opened an administration and improvement of the institution. He believed that the patients should come first in everything. Their welfare was always uppermost in his mind.

Retaining the best methods from his predecessors, Dr. Drake instituted a number of reforms. Recreation and occupational therapy for patients were stressed under his direction.

Jacksonville State hospital, under Dr. Drake's guidance, was the first institution in the world to introduce roller skating as a recreation for mental patients. Later this form of amusement which was found to be beneficial to many cases was adopted by many other hospitals.

Introduced reforms

Dr. Drake believed that surroundings of mental patients should be bright and cheerful. The walls and ceilings of all wards were painted in attractive colors. Clothing of the patients also carried color that is lacking in other institutions.

Dr. Drake believed that good personal appearance actually helped a patient's mental pose, and patients of the local hospital have always been aided in presenting best appearance.

The administration building of the hospital was badly damaged by fire several years ago. Under Dr. Drake's supervision extensive repairs were made.

Many improvements to grounds and buildings were effected during the years he headed the institution. The Jacksonville hospital is regarded as one of the finest of its kind in the world. Dr. Drake was alert at all times to better the condition of all patients, and almost daily he received letters from grateful relatives of persons who had received treatment there.

Since coming to Jacksonville Dr. Drake has been one of the city's foremost citizens. Cooperating in all worthy causes, he was a valuable asset not only to the hospital but to the community at large. His interests by no means were confined to the borders of the state institution.

Doctor Drake was a prominent figure in Illinois' public health and welfare circles for twenty-five years. He entered the state service in 1912 in the administration of Governor Edward F. Dunne as the first director of the state department of public health, and continued in this capacity during the administration of Governor Frank O. Lowden, later resigning to assume the position of medical statistician for
